

1st International Symposium on Computational Materials and Biological Sciences

Sep 10-12, 2013

Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan

Scope and Topics

With development of high performance computers and new theoretical methods, computational method is now indispensable in modern materials and biological sciences. This symposium appears as an ideal opportunity to discuss the latest development and exchange technical ideas in the field of computational materials and biological sciences.

This symposium covers mainly following computational methods; molecular dynamics simulations, first-principles calculations, novel MD methods (DFT, QM/MM, hybrid, etc.)

Organizers

Kenji Yasuoka (Keio Univ., Japan)

Kholmirzo T. Kholmurodov (JINR, Russia)

Tomoyuki Yamamoto (Waseda Univ., Japan)

Important date

Abstract Submission: July 31st, 2013

Registration fee

JPY 10,000

Conference site

Nishi-waseda Campus (Faculty of Science and Engineering), Waseda University
